But God was in the church. Hence it was stronger than all "principalities and powers."

2. This ideal church was composed principally of the poor. When John sent to Christ asking for preof that he was the Messiah. the crowning evidence was: "To the poor the Gospel is preached," imposters and man-invented religious, always address the rich. Mohammedanism, Brahminism, Confucinaism—these all sought entrance to palaces and the support of the wealthy and powerful. Christ came eating and drinking with publicans and sinners. And these people largely composed that first church. The Apostles were fishermen and tu-gatherers. The poorest, the beggars, and hundreds from the lowest middle classes—purified in that Pentacostal fiery baptism—joined the mass of that church. Darius and a Roman Captain; Nicodemus, one of the seventy elders; and Joseph. of that church. Daries and a Roman Capacity, Nicodemus, one of the seventy eiders; and Joseph, who furnished a tomb for the dead Christ—these and many ethers, came from the rich and the uristocratic class, to join this Christian democracy. The poor and the rich met together, equal, before their maker. But the great mass of the church was compased of the middle and poorer classics.

Lespon, August 28th.—A later dispatch from the Foc Chow correspondent of the Times says: "I have just returned from Kin-pai. All the de-fenses along the Min river are gone. The Chinese troops bolted. The French fleet can bombard the mainland, but its occupation is impossible."

THE PRENCH ORDERED OUT OF CANTON SHANGHAI, Aug. 30.—All the French have left Canton now. It is asserted that Admiral Courbet left the Min River with the intention of going to Canton. The Chinese antitary commanders have everywhere received imperial orders to attack all French war ships and morehant vessels which attempt to enter the leading treaty ports. Those in port are ordered to depart immediately. Telegrans for the Chinese Government lines are not accepted unless written in English.

The great credit is due to Depaty Daylou, has placing the kedge, which was selely his own idea, keeping the vessel from going broadside on and thus being placed in a position that would have caused her total loss. To the crew of the Myrtie Club praise is due, as they were untiring in their efforts even in the frail shell, to aid and assist in every way, and although the note! forwarded to the consignee brought no good results, they still performed other duties of a more authous and dangerous nature. Mr. Pfluger's offer of assistance was given without any desire of gain, and the captain foli grateful for the generous offer.

The only person on whom blame falls is the one who seemingly wilfully neglected his duty, pilot MeIntyre, and the only reason why there was not a Nessure disaster was lack of wild and well.
